

A dispatch from Washington correspondent furnishes official advice from Gen. Hooker's headquarters, which contradicts the reports of the defeat of the Union forces at Gettysburg Gap or Centerville. Beyond the usual skirmishing, in all of which we were successful, there has been no fighting in Gen. Hooker's Department, except the cavalry engagement previously reported. It is believed that Ewell was marching to join the main body of Lee's army; but the position of the latter is not stated. It is further believed that there is no considerable force of the enemy north of the Potomac. The sensation reports of a rebel movement against Pittsburgh, are about as reliable as the wild rumors we have been hearing from Pennsylvania for several days. The Union forces have commenced capturing the marauding bands in Pennsylvania, and General Couch now holds Chambersburg, which is fortified and prepared for defense.

Our advice from Vicksburg are to Tuesday, the 16th inst. The report brought to Cairo of the fall of that city is not to be credited. The siege was in progress, and a steady bombardment from the front and rear continued. Johnson was on the east side of Big Black River, fortifying. From this it is inferred that he does not contemplate offensive operations. We publish further particulars of the invasion of Indiana by a party of guerrillas, briefly mentioned in our dispatches on Saturday morning. They numbered about 150, and committed great excesses, until a portion of their force was captured, and others killed, on Blue river, in Crawford county. Gov. Morton has ordered the prisoners to be confined in Jeffersonville penitentiary, preparatory to their trial as murderers, unless they can prove that they are regular rebel troops. They are said to belong to the Fourth rebel Kentucky Cavalry.

Newbern, N. C., advises of the 17th confirm the previous rumors of strong Union organizations in the mountain regions of Western North Carolina, and the adjoining counties of East Tennessee. They are joined by deserters from the rebel army, to whom they extend protection. Governor Vance has professed his inability to send troops against them.

The Osage Indians recently killed, scalped and decapitated a rebel commission of nineteen persons, including nine officers, who had gone to Colorado and New Mexico to endeavor to muster in the Secession element of those Territories.

The notorious blockade running steamer, Herald, was sunk on the night of the 11th while trying to get past our fleet off Charleston. Several broadsides were poured into her at a distance of only 300 yards. It is claimed that the blockade off Charleston is now perfect.

In the cargo of one of the prize steamers lately captured and brought into New York, large quantities of tomahawks have been discovered, manufactured by British neutral traders, and sent to the rebels for arming the Indians to aid in the prosecution of this accursed rebellion. Also, large quantities of a nondescript savage weapon, something between a tomahawk and a butcher's cleaver, stamped "W. Gilpin, Wedge Mills, 1862," evidently intended for arming the Indians. A heavy hail and thunder storm visited Western Pennsylvania on Friday. Much damage was done to crops, several buildings were struck by lightning and others blown down in the vicinity of Pittsburgh.

Advices from Fort Monroe to the 17th mention the flight of Wise beyond the Chickahominy, and the entrance of Gordon's division, the advance of our troops, into New Kent Court House. This place is twenty-five miles east of Richmond. The Fort Monroe correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer writes, on the above date: "In a day or two, many interesting facts may be chronicled. It will not do to hint at strategic movements at all times, but when they shall have been completed, the more eager will hear of deeds of daring performed by men who are worthy of the praise and confidence of all loyal citizens."

The steamer Fingal, one of the swiftest and most successful of the English blockade running vessels, which has been blockaded in Tybee Sound by our fleet for some months since, has been captured after a thirty minutes' fight, according to the Richmond papers; probably while attempting to make her escape.

A Union mass meeting, attended by 20,000 people, was held at Concord, N. H., on the 17th, at which addresses were delivered by Gen. Butler, Postmaster-General Blair, Gen. Hamilton of Texas, and others. A series of resolutions were adopted, among them one which said "that the men of the loyal States who by word or deed, directly or indirectly, under whatever pretense or disguise, encourage the recruiting and maintaining of our army and navy, or in any other way lend their aid to schemes calculated to embarrass the Government in this crisis of the national life, ally themselves with the rebellion and are traitors at heart."

On Saturday last, Samuel Whetstone, who resides between Iron Valley Furnace and Hamden, in Jackson county, got into a quarrel at Hamden, about Valladolid, with Harvey Tissue, a son of William Tissue, Esq., of Hamden, and shot him. The ball entered the abdomen, and has not been extracted. At last accounts Tissue was not expected to live. Whetstone has made his escape. Whisky was the cause of the trouble. Whetstone is a peaceable man when sober, but dangerous when drinking. He was intoxicated at the time of the difficulty. Jackson Standard.

JENKINS MEN AT HAGERSTOWN.
How the Rebels Treat Our Soldiers and Traitors.—A correspondent of the New York Herald learns the following particulars of the rebel occupation of Hagerstown, Md., on Monday, from a citizen of the place:

The rebel force was composed of two regiments of cavalry and three regiments of mounted infantry, with four small cavalry batteries, under command of Gen. Jenkins—the same who commanded at the destruction of the iron bridge at Fairmont, in West Virginia, in April last. The advance guard arrived in the town about three o'clock in the morning, but the main body did not come up until about nine o'clock.

The troops were hailed by the citizens with manifest joy, and the best the town afforded was set before them for their breakfast. General Jenkins issued an order before coming into Maryland forbidding pillaging, and promising any who might be caught in such vandalism in the state a speedy and severe punishment. Hence the troops were orderly and well-behaved, bought freely of boots, shoes, clothing, hams, bacon and staples for immediate use, for which they paid in greenbacks. They seemed to be well supplied with the last named article, and one captain jocularly remarked to a lady, in the presence of my informant, that their paymaster made the last payment all with greenbacks. Mr. ——— avers that he counted the troops as they rode in four out of town, and he is confident that in this column there were not over twenty-five hundred men, although he learned of one of much larger dimensions passing northward on the pike six miles to the westward, and still another on the Mercersburg road. General Jenkins borrowed a few horses of the citizens to mount some of his men whose animals had become unfit for service, for which he gave receipts with a religious promise to return them as soon as he got over the line into Pennsylvania. The only damage sustained was the cutting of two telegraph poles on either side of the place. The rebels had with them quite a number of Union officers whom they had captured near Martinsburg, among whom was a paymaster, for which the one referred to by the rebel Captain as having paid them off in "greenbacks."

While General Jenkins was in Hagerstown he exhibited many traits which it is to be hoped is characteristic of the man. An incident will illustrate. About noon yesterday a Lieutenant and five men, wearing the uniform of Union soldiers, crept out of some of the houses of the town where they had been hidden, and delivered themselves up. When they appeared before Gen. Jenkins the following conversation occurred:

Jenkins—Hailo you are you, and where did you come from?
Lieutenant—We belong to the Union army, or did belong to it, but we don't wish to fight any longer against our Southern brethren; so when our forces left here we stayed behind, and to-day we came out to be paroled.
Jenkins—What did you say about "Southern brethren"? By G—d, if I thought I had a twenty-fifth cousin who was as white lived as you are, I would kill him and set him up in my barnyard to make sheep own their lambs. I'll show you how I parole such pukes as you are. You are too d—d miserable to be paroled in military style.

So saying, he ordered a detail of six men and a sergeant—"good lads" follows with thick boots"—who paroled the recent Federals to the west border of the town, where the paroling process ceased, and the detail and crowd came back highly pleased with Jenkins' mode of paroling cowards.

The whole rebel force left Hagerstown early last evening, and about ten o'clock a tremendous fire was directed in the direction of Greencastle. Farmers from Pennsylvania who came into Hagerstown early this morning, state that as soon as the rebels got into the State of Pennsylvania they took every horse, killed every animal, and burned every house and barn and bay-ried on their route.

In a late letter to the St. Louis Democrat from Vicksburg, the writer says: "I was in a rifle-pit yesterday, twenty yards from the enemy's lines, on Sherman's front. The poor devils have had all their guns silenced and can't fire a shot. They throw hand-grenades on our men who are working away underneath their forts, and who throw them back again. You may talk of Sebastopol and Malakoff, but it is baby work to this. Nothing ever yet equalled the work of our soldiers in getting up these works. You would have to see it to believe it. All the Richmonds would be nothing to the one twentieth of the nine miles of works the devils have thrown up in front, and the obstructions they have left behind our army for six miles. If we can ever get a reporter to tell the truth he will write a tale of more interest than any that has been published for a century. Now and then we sink a vessel, or get one sunk, but we will pump the water out as soon as the town falls, which will certainly be in ten days. Even now the rebel garrisons are sucking each others' toes, from which I am told they gain great sustenance, it being the nearest approach they have to getting corn."

A REBEL HOWL.—A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer of the 13th, howls tremendously over Yankee raids into the Peninsula countries. He says: "This is the seventh county, in the last four weeks, that they have pillaged, and if this thing continues, the people will be left to starve. These counties have furnished large supplies to the Government and will the Government now leave us dependent and defenseless."

HOVER'S PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY,
OVER N. P. FENNER'S STORE, Public Square, Gallipolis, OHIO.
My patrons and friends, give an ear to my call. Pleasant, witty, agreeable, stout, this, short or tall. All ages and sexes, young or old, rich or poor. For I'm pleased as you know, when you enter my door. To gain your attention, I have written in verse. Which perhaps you will think neither witty nor terse. But on this occasion, as I wish you to know it, I have timidly ventured my strength as a poet; Not in measure "Byronic" but more "Hudibrastic." Which if short, of a "foet" will stretch like gum 'latex. Should the want of a word, make the verse to stand still. Why make the line longer or shorter at will. Which I think you will own is convenient and quite. And of course makes the task more agreeable and light. Now after this prologue, your attention to win, I now make my best bow to you all, and begin! Give a call at my room; and while there take a seat. And my pictures I am sure 'can't be better in town. To begin with the shrewd before he can walk, Or the prattle of childhood just learning to talk. There I'll welcome you all, without "putting on airs." Take a walk through the streets, and the city all around. And my pictures I am sure 'can't be better in town.
